The Inn at USC, which opened in late 2005, is the new leader in quality accommodations. This state-of-the-art hotel was built around an historic family home and was designed to complement the historic character of the two structures remaining on the 1600 block of Pendleton Street. The original family home, built in 1912, was restored and incorporated into the Inn.

A front plaza with a water feature leads to the lobby and to gardens typical of the University neighborhood. The balconies and porches of the Inn give it the feel of the residential area surrounding it. The first floor consists of the lobby, offices, and a library. The second floor features three luxury suites. The Inn features 117 guest rooms, including 31 two-room suites. The third floor is designed as a concierge level with a concierge lounge. Other amenities include an exercise room, meeting and seminar rooms, a catering kitchen, and a dining area for breakfast for guests, and catered luncheon service when needed.
